Dear Members,

As in every odd-numbered year, HGEA is locked in contract negotiations for our bargaining units. This year, seven separate units are looking to negotiate a successor agreement for the 2019-2021 contract period. And, as usual, we are running into the standard opposition to ensuring that a fair wage increase will be negotiated.

During this round of bargaining, however, the conversation around wage inequity is growing louder all across our country, including here in Hawaii. A movement is growing to provide all workers a living wage. We’ve seen it happen in different states, and here at home the successful UNITE-HERE strike illustrated the need to ensure that all workers receive better wages as the cost of living continues to soar. Additionally, this idea was validated with the amendment of the minimum wage bill in the Hawaii Senate that would establish a new minimum for state employees.

Why is this unprecedented move to propose a $17 minimum wage for state employees so significant? To start, many of our HGEA members do not currently make $17 an hour. In fact, well over 3,000 members make less than the proposed minimum wage of $17 an hour. These hard-working people, who make government function every day and provide vital public services, struggle to make ends meet and provide for their families. And let’s not even get started in talking about the cost of health care that you get via the EUTF. It’s no longer the case that lower wages for public workers are justified by a more generous benefits package. In Hawaii public workers pay approximately 40 percent of the cost of their healthcare benefit — one of the highest percentages of any public workers in the country.

Now we have seen the salary commissions at all levels of state and county government recommending substantial pay increases for elected and appointed officials this year. The reasons cited: cost of living, providing a wage to recruit and retain qualified individuals, and ensuring that managers are paid better than their subordinates. All of these reasons should sound familiar — they are the same logical reasons we cite in our negotiations with the very people who are looking to get an increase as recommended by the salary commissions.

As our union continues to fight for reasonable and fair pay increases to improve our members’ lives, we say it’s high time our elected and appointed leaders apply the same rationale they use to justify their pay increases to those who really do the work. It’s time to for Hawaii to invest in its public workers.

In solidarity,

Randy Perreira
HGEA Executive Director
During this and every legislative session, HGEA staff has been hard at work tracking, monitoring and testifying on bills that affect working families like yours.

In particular, HGEA raised serious concerns about House Bill 1539, which seeks to eliminate the Hawaii Health Systems Corporation (HHSC) Oahu Regional Board and to consolidate operations into the HHSC Corporate Board. At the time this issue of The Public Employee went to print, the Senate had made significant changes to the bill, such as changing the composition of the corporate board and creating a right of first refusal for the state Department of Health, the Governor and the Mayor to purchase property or rights prior to privatization.

HGEA Executive Director Randy Perreira recently met with and gave updates to members who work at Maluhia Hospital and Leahi Hospital, the two hospitals on Oahu that would be impacted with the passage of this bill. As the elderly population increases, the need is increasing for the residential and day care services provided at Maluhia and Leahi, which provide important safety net services for the community. In written testimony opposing the HHSC Oahu Region consolidation bill, Perreira said, “We respectfully raise concerns over the continuation of patient care and the impact to operations should the Oahu region be eliminated … after the privatization and removal of the three Maui region hospitals from the Corporation, we cannot support a piecemeal approach to integrate one region while the other regions maintain independence.”

HGEA members also testified in opposition to the bill and expressed the importance of keeping the Oahu Regional Board.

HGEA continues to closely monitor this bill and others. For the most up-to-date information, please visit www.hgea.org/prioritybills.

Thank you to everyone who came out to support Tommy Waters in the special election for Honolulu City Council District 4. From sign waving to canvassing and phone banking to helping with campaign literature and talking to friends and family in the district, our members, retirees and staff were there helping out. Thanks again to all of the volunteers, and congratulations to Tommy Waters — we look forward to working with you!

HGEA looks forward to presenting our cases for fair wage increases to recruit and retain highly qualified employees to the arbitration panels.

We will keep you updated on the status of negotiations through eBulletin.

合同谈判更新

没有达成协议，单位正向仲裁方向前进

随着《公众雇员》一文的刊出，谈判团队为单位2、3、4、8、9、13和14提出了“非正式”反对方案来反驳雇主的“非正式”提议。这些团队列出了反对提案，因为雇主的提案不被接受，而且其他工会也得到了更好的谈判结果。因此，雇主拒绝了所有谈判团队的反对提案。这意味着单位将开始与9单元进行仲裁，9单元代表大约1200名注册专业护士，将在5月开始。

雇主已提出将增加其对夏威夷雇主-工会健康福利信托基金（EUTF）的贡献，以保持60/40的雇主/雇员比例，基于最受欢迎的HMSA 80/20计划。此增加将在2019年7月1日生效。法律禁止我们仲裁雇主为EUTF做出的金额。

HGEA期待在仲裁委员会面前提出我们的公平工资增加情况，以吸引和保留高素质的员工。

我们将通过eBulletin持续更新谈判的最新情况。

With 15 years of experience in public safety as a lifeguard I have a good grasp on the issues that affect us all. Having testified during the last BU14 arbitration and have been serving on the negotiations team and have demonstrated that I can work with both LEOs and OSD members.
Sun Up to Sun Down Lifeguard Coverage Begins at Hanauma Bay

For the guardians of Hawaii’s beaches, saving lives doesn’t stop just because the clock says it’s quitting time. Now, in the new Ocean Safety District 5 at Hanauma Bay on Oahu’s east side, work hours are extended in a pilot program that gives the public added protection.

“I can’t tell you how many times over the past ten years I’ve done a rescue either before or after work,” says Ka‘īulani Bowers, Water Safety Officer, HGEA Unit 14. “So to have the ability to be here from sun up to sun down is great, we will be able to help more people.”

Early Sunday morning, February 24, 2019, the pilot program launched with high hopes and expectations. Twenty-five ocean safety officers will work 10-hour shifts, four days per week, extending lifeguard coverage from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the winter and until 7 p.m. in the longer days of summer.

Honolulu Ocean Safety Chief John Titchen spoke to the new crew during orientation: “We’ve gone all in on this and you guys are part of it. We are a team, like a little family out here. If it’s going to work, it’s going to because of you. It’s literally you guys.” Titchen said the whole department is watching to see how the pilot program works out.

The sun up to sun down coverage is a first in Hawaii and became a reality as the employer, the union (HGEA) and Unit 14 members worked together through the consultation process, an important part of union representation. Due to the new 10-hour shifts, adjustments had to be made for vacation and holidays.

“It’s a good start to see how the extended hours will service the public. It’s something the public and the guards want,” said HGEA Field Services Officer Joy Kuwabara. “They really take it to heart and want to prevent any potential accidents and ensure that the public is safe.”

The objective of consultation is to make sure organizational changes are successful for both the employers and the employees. Per contract, the employer is required to consult with the union, the members’ exclusive representative. This process gives employees a forum and voice to express their ideas and concerns when the employer wants to implement major changes. It’s important to hear from the workers because no one has more knowledge of the job and its requirements than the people who are doing it each day. Without a strong union, employers can and do make unilateral changes and employees may have little to no say. In this consultation, one of the many
The pilot program extending lifeguard coverage at Hanauma Bay began in February 2019, with 25 ocean safety officers working 10-hour shifts, four days per week, from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the winter and until 7 p.m. in the summer.

Orientation for lifeguards stationed at Hanauma Bay.

Hanauma Bay, a protected marine life conservation area and underwater park, is one of the top tourist destinations on Oahu. Items HGEA worked for on behalf of the lifeguards was to keep holiday pay consistent with those working eight-hour days, which is paid at time and a half. The employer initially kept holiday pay the same, however, HGEA argued that it is only fair to pay time and a half for the full 10-hour shift because that is the District 5 regular hours. It was eventually agreed upon.

“Your union representative fought for you. Thanks to our union, HGEA, you get the full time paid for holidays,” said Training Captain Jimmy Barros. “This was just one of the many issues we worked through. We are really excited for this project. It has huge potential.”

Extending water safety officers’ work hours on beaches has been a hot topic as tourism numbers continue to set records. In 2018 nearly 10 million visitors arrived in the islands boosting the economy but putting a strain on resources, infrastructure and public safety. The increase is a major jump from the 8.3 million visitors who arrived in 2014, and even that was a record at the time. Visitors to Hanauma Bay topped 1.5 million in 2017. With so many more people using the beaches, it makes sense to increase lifeguard services.

“It’s really exciting to work here. Every day there is constant action — there are so many people here who it’s their first time seeing the ocean, it’s their first time snorkeling so that also adds to a lot of people getting into trouble,” added Bowers. “You have to stay very vigilant and very focused. I like it. I signed up to help people and to get to work here I get to help the most amount of people in a day.”

“Take your time. If you are trying a mask and snorkel just get comfortable in a place where you can stand, that way if you have difficulties you’re standing and you’re not far away in deep water. If you have children keep them close, and it always helps to have a floatation device.”
Every day, there is an HGEA member working to provide vital services to the public. These members help to keep our state and counties running smoothly and our communities safe.

Cristy Yokoyama

As a case manager at Waiauva Correctional Facility (WCF) on Oahu, a 334-bed, minimum-security facility for sentenced male inmates, Cristy Yokoyama comes up with a treatment plan for inmates to help them successfully re-enter the community. All WCF inmates participate in education or substance abuse treatment programs, and Yokoyama helps them get ready for work furloughs and ensures that they follow their treatment plan. In minimum-security facilities, the inmates have more privileges and are housed in dorms not cells, but she says they are held accountable and are mandated to work or go to school. Yokoyama, who has a bachelor’s degree in psychology, has worked at WCF for 22 years. As an HGEA Unit 13 member, she appreciates having the workplace protection that the union provides and the lobbying for raises and benefits that the union does at the Legislature. “I’m thankful to be in a union,” she says. “I never thought to not be a member.”

Delia Tauro

Unit 13 member Delia Tauro has been with the state Department of Taxation in Hilo for 12 years. As an auditor, she audits businesses and helps taxpayers with any questions they may have. She is an HGEA steward, is actively involved on the Community Action Committee and has been a delegate to the General Assembly where she enjoyed meeting other Unit 13 members from different islands. Tauro says she wanted to work in government for stability, and that the union was a big draw for her. “HGEA is something great to be a part of. Our union protects and fights for employee rights.” In her spare time, Tauro likes to cook, try new recipes and go walking, and loves traveling. She most recently went to Germany for the Christmas markets, and has also been to Italy and France, and says she particularly enjoyed Paris.

What would you do if you believed your boss asked you to do something against a co-worker that wasn’t right? What if your boss ridiculed you repeatedly for not doing it? Then changed your days off without consulting with you, knowing that your days off were your Sabbath.

This situation happened to a fellow HGEA Unit 3 member who is a Park Ranger. He turned to his union for help. A grievance was filed on his behalf, and after a process that included an investigation, meetings, discussions, and an arbitration hearing, relief was provided to the union member.

The Park Ranger had been on the job for about 10 years, and it was going well until the day his boss asked him to watch a new co-worker and “get dirt on him.” The boss wanted him to stay with the co-worker constantly throughout the day and report back. When he didn’t comply, the boss verbally harassed him and eventually changed his days off knowing that he had waited several years to get Friday and Saturday off.

The arbitrator determined that the Employer violated Article 4(B) and 5 of the collective bargaining agreement (CBA). The decision concluded that Article 4(B) requires that changes in conditions of work covered by the CBA be made with mutual consent and whenever possible, work schedules shall provide an Employee with two consecutive days off. The arbitrator also determined that it was still possible to accomplish the Employer’s mission and grant the Park Ranger Fridays and Saturdays off.

The case was successfully presented by the HGEA Advocacy Group. Stacy Moniz, Advocacy Manager who argued the case, stated that he is very happy with the result because through the union’s efforts the harassment and retaliation against a union member was eliminated. Moniz stressed that hopefully the decision would motivate the Employer to be more proactive in preventing incidents like this one.

This case helps to illustrate how employees can be mistreated in the workplace and why enforcing HGEA’s collective bargaining agreement, your contract, is so important. To view a copy of your contract, log in to the HGEA website and go to the Member Dashboard. It’s important for everyone to review their contract and know their rights.

If you believe your collective bargaining rights have been violated, contact your island division or the HGEA member service center at service@hgea.org or 808 543-0000.
When Kilauea volcano on Hawaii Island explosively erupted in May 2018, Unit 6 member Orasa Fernandez was living and working on Oahu. She had no idea that this catastrophic volcanic event, which destroyed over 700 homes and displaced communities and families, ironically would give her an opportunity to finally move back home to Hilo.

Helping to Keep Hawaii Schools Safe, Secure and Prepared

As one of three safety and security specialists in the Safety, Security, and Emergency Preparedness Branch of the state Department of Education, Fernandez was selected to go to Hawaii Island for several weeks from May to June and worked with a damage assessment team from the Office of School Facilities and Support Services. She served as support for damage assessment at 17 schools and as a liaison. “Luckily lava flow did not threaten any of the DOE schools and facilities,” Fernandez said. “Schools remained open and continued daily operations although air quality was a concern. Schools worked to ensure students and staff were safe and provided a safe environment for students to learn and employees to support and teach our children.”

During the eruption, Fernandez and the damage assessment team regularly met with agencies such as Hawaii County Civil Defense, state Department of Health, Hawaiian Volcano Observatory, Hawaii County Police Department, American Red Cross – Hawaii, and DOE Complex District Office and Schools. Working closely with these agencies, they established and built partnerships and received first-hand understanding of the operations on Hawaii Island during emergencies and the coordination of emergency response.

Nearly a year after the eruption, Fernandez, who was born and raised in Hilo, said recovery efforts are ongoing. “Students, families and the community are still affected by the eruption event, even though the lava stopped in late August,” she noted. “There is a lot of emotions and feeling of loss for some residents. The effects of losing one’s home do not simply go away.”

Fernandez has an office at Pahoa High & Intermediate School, but the work she does is for all schools statewide, providing leadership and direction in the planning and development of safety and security programs for campuses. Her focus is on emergency readiness and preparation. “It’s great to have a specialist on island that can be readily available if a situation occurs here,” she said. “It was helpful during the recent Winter Storm Event, where I was able to attend the Hawaii County Civil Defense meeting and provide immediate assistance to the numerous partners in emergency management.”

As part of her job responsibilities, Fernandez ensures schools are prepared for an emergency, whether it’s man-made such as a bomb threat or a natural disaster such as a hurricane, by ensuring schools have an emergency action plan in place and conduct annual required drills. She works with the various agencies involved with shelter operations during a statewide emergency since the DOE schools are used as emergency shelters. She is involved with Makani Pahili, the state of Hawaii’s annual hurricane preparedness exercise involving all counties and state stakeholders.

In addition, she provides schools with assistance in disposing of unwanted hazardous materials such as science
I really enjoy my job. It has been a journey of growth, experience and networking. It has been a ride that I could not imagine.

The DOE’s Safety, Security, and Emergency Preparedness Branch ensures that DOE schools and facilities are in compliance with agencies such as Occupational Safety and Health Administration and Environmental Protection Agency. Fernandez works closely with Hawaii Emergency Management Agency, City and County of Honolulu’s Department of Emergency Management, and Hawaii County Civil Defense, and conducts ongoing safety and emergency preparedness training to school administrators and personnel.

Having been with the DOE for 18 years, nine with the Safety, Security, and Emergency Preparedness Branch, Fernandez is constantly learning on the job and takes the initiative to expand her knowledge and experience and learn new skills. She has taken continuing education courses that included safety, emergency management, and Homeland Security studies, and has received various certificates. “I just want to make sure I provide the best service I can and finish the task at hand,” she said. “Motivation is our kids, students and staff. My passion is serving our community, helping one another, and making things better now and for future generations to come.”

It is the memory of being on Hawaii Island as part of the damage assessment team last year that Fernandez will never forget, and not just for the fact that the experience brought her back home. She loved the camaraderie of being with people from the different agencies. “My team, while driving, sang along with the radio and got me to sing along with them,” she said, with a chuckle.

“I really enjoy my job. It has been a journey of growth, experience and networking. It has been a ride that I could not imagine.”
In March, HGEA members on Maui helped to plant rare Haleakala silverswords in an effort to increase this threatened species’ population and help preserve the natural resources and environment. About 20 volunteers participated in this annual project, co-sponsored by the HGEA Maui Community Action Committee and the state Department of Land & Natural Resources, Division of Forestry & Wildlife, transplanting silverswords along the slopes of Haleakala. The Haleakala silversword, or ‘āhinahina, is federally listed as threatened and is found only on the slopes of Haleakala at altitudes above 6,900 feet.
Students, faculty and staff at Chiefess Kapiolani Elementary School in Hilo were pleasantly surprised to find their school looking new and improved after one weekend in February 2019. There was new carpet in the library, new bulletin boards, and freshly painted bathrooms, parking lots and other areas of the campus. (In March four new basketball systems were also installed.)

More than 200 union members and their families from 18 local labor unions and eight businesses as well as community organizations and other volunteers worked together in the annual “Labor of Love” project. Each year the Hawaii State AFL-CIO’s Labor Community Services Program selects a Hawaii Department of Education school and coordinates with its union members and community partners, through donations and in-kind contributions, to help improve and repair the school.

“We have a lot of talent and much heart in the labor community. Our union brothers and sisters take pride in helping our communities,” said Hawaii State AFL-CIO President and HGEA Executive Director Randy Perreira. “This is a much-needed event and we are happy to lend our resources to help.”
More than 200 members of Unit 6, which include educational officers, gathered for their annual Institute Day Conferences in February. The theme was “Shaping the Future in Unity,” with conferences held on Oahu, Hawaii, Kauai, Maui, Molokai and Lanai. The highlight was the panel discussion at the Oahu EO Institute with Hawaii Board of Education Chair Catherine Payne, Department of Education Deputy Superintendent Phyllis Unebasami and State Representative Amy Perruso (pictured).

At a recent Unit 3 Oahu Island Division meeting, Water Safety Officer and Unit 14 member Kurt Lager conducted CPR training for Unit 3 member stewards who attended the meeting. Pictured here, Lager shows Unit 3 member Suzy Okino how chest compressions are done to help keep blood pumping through the body. For those untrained in CPR, you can provide hands-only CPR, which means uninterrupted chest compressions of 100 to 120 a minute — or the same tempo as the song “Staying Alive” by the Bee Gees, as Lager suggests to make it easy to remember.
